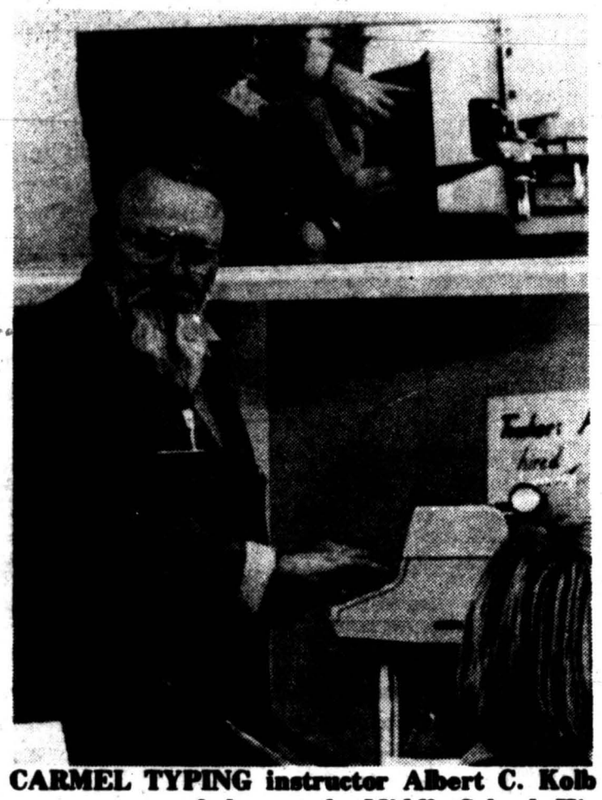
Who's using computers now?

Is it your physician that determines if you need surgery? Or is it a computer? One of the fathers of the computer age, Dr. Sydney R. Parker, of Carmel, gives odds it is the computer. All it cannot do, he says, is win at checkers. The store is on page three.



CARMEL TYPING instructor Albert C. Kolb runs an unusual class at the Middle School. His young teenage pupils handle a significant amount of the routine typing school employees would do. It follows his credo that if the work is important, the student will learn. Details are on page 17.

Tough script, great play

The pumpkin carvers

More than 50 entries were judged Sunday at the annual Carmel Pumpkin Carving Contest at Sunset Center. Pictures of the judging and the work that led to the winning appear on page 18.

Upcoming events at Carmel's churches are listed on page 26. For instance, did you know the Carmel Mission is celebrating the feast of its patron saint?

Beef over added biffy makes new beer tap iffy

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE VILLAGE CORNER Restaurant, incubator issue that led to formation of the residential lobbying group Old Carmel, was denied a permit to serve wine and beer last week. The Carmel Planning Commission, in its role as the Board of Adjustments, refused the request partly on the basis the restaurant did not have enough toilets.

The seven-member board failed to muster the necessary five votes for approval. Despite the 4-3 affirmative vote, the permit was denied.

Commissioners Dorothea Roberts, Robert Stephenson and Eileen Thompson opposed the permit.

Co-owner John Bikas has appealed the decision to the City Council. The appeal should reach the council at its Tuesday, Nov. 14, meeting.

Bikas said he could not afford to add another toilet at the restaurant.

"We're the only restaurant in town where you can get an egg salad sandwich for 85 cents," he said. Bikas said although prices are moderate, his rent exceeds $2,000 per month. He said he could not spend the estimated $10,000 to install a second restroom.

•

THE SURFACE ISSUE was a use permit, but the philosophical issue divided commissioners into two camps.

Commissioners Sandy Swain, Dr. Donald Davidson, Leslie Gross and Dr. Manfred Prescott firmly favored issuing the beer and wine permit.

The four commissioners were appointed by Mayor Gunnar Norberg within the past year and a half. Norberg and Old Carmel share philosophical ties. Davidson and Gross, former members of the group, argued doggedly for permit issuance.

The toilet requirement was first suggested by the board's land use subcommittee. The subcommittee, composed of Commissioners Roberts and Thompson, said it wants to assure all restaurants in Carmel have adequate washroom facilities. The Village Corner presently has only one toilet.

City Attorney George Brehmer said there is no municipal law that would require a second toilet at the Village Corner.

•

"I THINK we're setting a precedent here and I think it's strange we picked the Village Corner to do it. I don't think there has been another case where this has happened," declared Commissioner Davidson, who claimed the restaurant was being victimized by commission bias.

Commissioner Stephenson disagreed. Serving beer and wine is sufficient reason to require another toilet, he said.

The legality of the second-restroom requirement was questioned by Davidson. Under a strict reading of the city code, the Village Corner is not required to add a second toilet, said Brehmer, the city attorney.

He explained that a 1967 city ordinance requires second restrooms in new restaurants or restaurants enlarging seating or remodeling.

"Although a second restroom is not required by law," the attorney told the board, "you still must determine what is reasonable."

•

RECOMMENDATIONS FROM the subcommittee not only asked a second restroom, but also a provision for a minimum of one in-lieu or off-site parking space.

Arguments raised against the parking requirement caused Mrs. Roberts to back down, but she stood behind the restroom recommendation. "We are just trying to bring our older establishments up to our new standards," she said.

The issue of financial hardship was raised by owners Bikas and Aris Zavitsanos and by Commissioner Swain.

"The Village Corner's rent of $2,000 a month is staggering. I think we are unnecessarily penalizing them," the commissioner said.

The finances of a business should not be relevant to commission deliberations about use permits, Davidson replied.

After ripping the subcommittee findings and warning the commission about setting a bad precedent, Davidson suggested restricting the restaurant's service of beer and wine to after 6 p.m.

"For one so concerned about precedents, that seems to be setting a pretty bad one," Stephenson shot back to Davidson.

If the restaurant is open longer and receives more business, it can afford to install a second restroom, Stephenson claimed.

•

BIKAS SAID his restaurant was being singled out. He called the toilet request a "terrible" financial burden.

Three seek board posts

Sewer district vote nears

By AL EISNER

THREE CANDIDATES are vying for two seats on the board of the Carmel Sanitary District in Tuesday's election. Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

Incumbent James B. Pruitt, 64, an architect, has been a member of the board since 1954. Retired Air Force Colonel Vernon L. Head, 60, and Clark W. Struve, a 31-year-old insurance agent, are running for the seat vacated by Don Kirk, who declined to seek reelection after serving a four-year term.

The other three members of the board, elected two years ago, are Ken McGinnis, president; Charlotte Hurst; and Ted Weller.

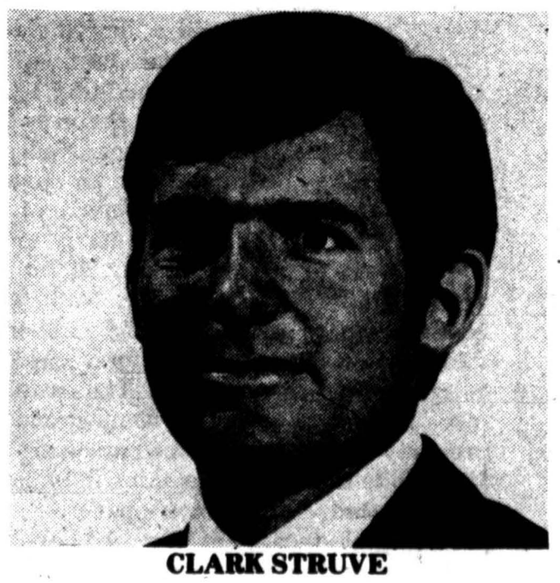
Elections to the board of the sanitary district, which encompasses all of the city of Carmel and much of the surrounding area, normally do not generate much voter interest, often attracting as little as 25 per cent of the registered voters. An unusual amount of attention has been paid to this election, however, because the district is on the brink of making crucial decisions on the expansion of the sewage treatment plant at the mouth of the Carmel River.

The district also has been told that it must stop discharging effluent into Carmel Bay, which was designated by the state as an area of "special biological significance" in 1975. These two issues, and a controversial study that predicts a 47 per cent growth in population in the district's "study area," were the subject of a public workship that drew an overflow crowd to Carmel High School on Oct. 25.

The controversial population report, prepared by the district's consultants, Sedway-Cooke, predicts steady growth culminating in a 47 per cent increase by 1990. The study, funded by the federal government, is part of an Areawide Facilities Plan that is being drawn to aid in predicting the district's funding needs.

•

BECAUSE OF the crucial nature of the election, and also because it has not received widespread media coverage, The Pine Cone contacted the candidates to get their views on the above questions. Two of the candidates, Head and Struve, were interviewed. The other candidate, Pruitt, has been out of town for almost two months and had not returned at press time.



CLARK STRUVE

Married, one daughter; president Monterey Peninsula Jaycees; director, Monterey Bay Life Underwriters' Association; board member, Armed Services YMCA; committee member, Monterey Peninsula Bicentennial Committee; past neighborhood commissioner, Carmel Boy Scout Troop 86; sponsor family, American Host Foundation Program. Served as an officer for one year in Vietnam conflict. Degree in risk management and insurance from San Jose State University; attended the American College, Bryn Mawr, Penn. A Chartered Life Underwriter.

"IF YOU HAVE a predictable 3-2 environmentalist vote on the board, why bother to meet at all?" says Struve. The reference is to the present composition of the board, which frequently votes 3-2, with Weller and Pruitt a minority in favor of growth with less restraint. Struve sees himself as a kind of "swing" vote, or independent board member who will vote his conscience after examing the facts.

"Don Kirk (the outgoing board member) has provided excellent balance. He looks at the issues fairly. I would like to fill that role," Struve says.

"I do have excellent rapport with everyone on the board. I have visited with every one at length and know that I can work with them," he adds.

State help needed

Dear Editor:

Public apathy is the main reason for the destruction of our natural wildlife and lands. Since the city officials of Carmel have not maintained Serra Trail Park, the Flanders-Doolittle property, as a natural reserve, I urge the public to write to the Department of Parks and Recreation, Director, Mr. Russell Cahill, Box 2390, Sacramento, 95811.

They should request that this Serra Trail Park be put into their responsible hands. This change of management will maintain the land in careful ecological tradition such as that of Point Lobos.

Reviews are news

Dear Editor:

A few months ago, when I wrote and asked that you replace your drama critic, I had in mind your getting someone else, not the cessation of such criticism.

There was a review (three weeks late) of Oklahoma!, but Play It Again, Sam, She Stoops to Conquer, Company and Sherlock Holmes all have opened without any Pine Cone reviews.

In a community that prides itself on its literary and artistic heritage, it seems strange and rather shabby for the official city newspaper to fail to cover such events.

Reviewing a play is reporting a story. I have for many years looked forward to buying a paper from the newsboy and comparing my opinion with that of an expert. But now I have to buy the Herald or the Pacific Grove paper to do so.

Do your job and get a drama critic.

(Editor's note: Reviewing all of the performing arts in Carmel is an ambitious undertaking. We are convinced events should be reviewed on a selective basis so there is balanced coverage between the varied arts. A review of the Barnyard Theatre production Company, by the way, is in this section of the Pine Cone.)

Supports candidate

Dear Editor:

It isn't often I get into the political lists. School teachers should be partial to their students, not to temporal causes nor temporary crusaders. There is, however, an election in the offing of some consequence and because of the excellence of one of the aspirants, I feel compelled to speak out in his behalf.

The election in question is for the two vacant seats on the Carmel Sanitary District Board, and the candidate I wish to endorse for one of those seats is Vernon Head. I have known this gentleman for seven years and have been continually impressed with his integrity, intelligence and interest in others. I have watched him inspire young people, work diligently and quietly for all the citizens of Carmel, and get difficult jobs done with a maximum of effort and a minimum of credit.

His counsel is wise and his judgment is sound because he does his homework. He puts service above self. He is the kind of man we need in public office and need badly. I know that the other candidates are good, but Vernon Head is a truly exceptional person. If he is willing to serve, I am more than willing to speak out in his behalf. A good man is hard to find, but you and I have a chance to vote for one.

Frederic "Buzz" Rainer

Endorses candidate

Dear Editor:

I hope our fellow citizens will know that the reason we haven't seen or heard an awful lot of Vernon Head's candidacy for the Carmel Sanitary Board is that he is a notably modest, unassuming man. I know him as a hard-working member of the Odello Land Acquisition Fund team (six months he gave them, practically full-time) that finally got the money collected to make possible the purchase, jointly with state and county funds, of the Odello West artichoke fields. For open space and, hopefully, forever more!

He is a quiet individual who does more thinking than talking, and I sure hope he gets elected to the sanitary board.

He is the only one of the candidates about whom we, as residents, know anything. Mr. Pruitt, the incumbent, is an architect and works closely with local builders; the other candidate is a pleasant-looking fellow in the insurance business, but he didn't state his views on anything in his brochure.

Vernon stands for keeping our community as much "like it is" as possible during the immediate and long-term future. A difficult planning period lies ahead. I hope more people will get out to vote on Tuesday than ever before, and that they'll also vote for Virginia Fry, the only candidate for the Airport Board who has any sense of restraining, rather than enlarging, the airport and its services.

Retire incumbent

Dear Editor:

Because my neighbors and I have endured odors for so many years from the inadequacy of the Carmel Sanitary District plant, I have taken an interest in board action and membership. Since a board election is on Tuesday, now is the time for examing records of the one incumbent as well as for considering new candidate qualification.

Although I do not know James Pruitt personally, I have been told that he is an affable and kindly gentleman. Certainly we should be grateful to him for giving over 20 years in the poorly paid and tiresome public service to the Carmel Sanitary District. But we must look objectively at what he has done or is doing and make sure he is not going to be elected simply because he's already there and a good fellow.

Note the following aspects of Mr. Pruitt's activity:

1) Mr. Pruitt served as an appointed board member from 1955 until a challenging election was held four years ago. In the past two years, he has missed approximately one-third of the special and regular meetings becasue of illness or other reasons.

2) He voted with the board members and supported the 1967 operating agreement to treat Pebble Beach sewage in the Carmel district's plant. This agreement has proved to be a difficult working arrangement, costly to the district and a cource of constant antagonism between the two boards.

3) His response to the "area of special biological significance" for Carmel Bay has been to support a suit against the state of California. What ever objections a board member may have to this designation, suing the state which funds part of the money for plant improvements seems a futile gesture, especially when all state and federal funding for the new digester or other improvements might have been withheld while a suit was pending.

4) Mr. Pruitt was a member of the district board and voted with them in 1955 when a large section of property now known as High Meadows, South Carmel Hills, Carmel Knolls and a fourth Carmel Properties parcel became part of an agreement to allow each building site to pay a $55 connection fee as the area subdivided. At that time, Clayton Neill was chairman of the board and also an engineer for the owner-developer of much of this land, Billy Hudson. Mr. Pruitt is an architect, and even without any direct connection to Mr. Hudson or Mr. Neill, could be expected to vote as he did supporting this very low fee established for a long term to encourage construction. The result of this is that, in 1977, connections for property not in those favored areas are now $550 while the $55 fee remains in effect for the favored large land parcels. This preferential treatment for a developer conflicts with public interest, and the district agreement to maintain it shows lack of financial foresight in managing a public service.

Wouldn't it be best for our community to say thank you to Mr. Pruitt for the time and effort and consider two other energetic and forward looking candidates?

City crackdown against unlicensed electronic games

ELECTRONIC GAMES in Carmel taverns can bring a tidy profit, but at least one bar has been warned by the city it must pay to offer play.

Sade's Lounge, Ocean at Monte Verde, operates two amusement machines without the required city license. Each machine needs a license and each license costs $100 a year.

The crackdown stems from a September report in which the Carmel Police Department said only two of the existing eight electronic game machines in Carmel were properly licensed. Of the six offenders, however, only the two at Sade's had no license at all. The other machines merely had no license posted on them, as required by municipal law.

City Attorney George Brehmer, acting last week, sent a written warning to the owners of Sade's — get licenses or face a $25 fine on each machine.

The issue of electronic game controls is likely to come up again because City Administrator Jack Collins has proposed doubling the $25 fine. His proposal would give violators 6 months to pay before they would face court action.

•

THE POLICE REPORT, presented by Chief William Ellis to the Business License Review Board, indicated only two of Carmel's eight electronic game machines were operated in compliance with the city license law. The infractions he mentioned involved failure to display licenses, but in the case of Sade's, the machines had no license.

The city collects an annual $100 licensing fee for each electronic game in a commercial establishment.

The fee is four times that required in other Peninsula cities, according to Jerry Pettas of Just Amusement Games, which supplies the machines to two Carmel establishments.

"That fee is a rip-off," claimed Pettas. "They can charge that much only because it's Carmel."

Licensing fees in nearby cities include: Monterey, $25; Seaside, $25 to $30; Salinas, $25; and Pacific Grove, $15.

•

A GAME MACHINE license requires filing an application and a $100 deposit with the city accounting clerk. Licenses are approved by the Business License Review Board.

The process usually takes about a week, according to Karen Love, a city accounting clerk.

Electronic games entered the Carmel bar and restaurant scene less than two years ago. The Pump House introduced the first machine in June 1976.

Close to a dozen of the machines have since zipped and zapped through various local taverns.

Most of the machines are basic "ball-and-paddle" games, according to Pettas. They generally cost 25 cents a play.

•

IN AUGUST 1976, Ellis warned the license board that one machine that played computerized poker could "incite gambling activity."

An application for a poker machine at the Piscean Restaurant, Sixth and Dolores, was unanimously denied by the board because its members said the game could encourage gambling activity.

The license problems in Carmel involve only electronic games. There are no pinball machines in Carmel, according to Building Inspector Fred Cunningham.

The electronic machines do not come cheap. Just Amusement Games lists new machines at from $900 to $1,800.

The company and the operator generally split the profits, according to Pettas. "But it's not worth it in Carmel," he explained, "because there is too much hassle."

Village Corner denied beer permit

"The Village Corner's rent of $2,000 a month is staggering. I think we are unnecessarily penalizing them," the commissioner said.

The finances of a business should not be relevant to commission deliberations about use permits, Davidson replied.

After ripping the subcommittee findings and warning the commission about setting a bad precedent, Davidson suggested restricting the restaurant's service of beer and wine to after 6 p.m.

"For one so concerned about precedents, that seems to be setting a pretty bad one," Stephenson shot back to Davidson.

If the restaurant is open longer and receives more business, it can afford to install a second restroom, Stephenson claimed.

•

BIKAS SAID his restaurant was being singled out. He called the toilet request a "terrible" financial burden.

"The rent is extremely high and our lease is extremely low," said his partner, Aris Zavitsanos. He noted the Village Corner has used up one year of its five-year lease.

Davidson reminded the commissioners only seven restaurants in Carmel do not serve alcoholic beverages. The original Village Corner use permit does not allow alcohol.

OLD CARMEL MEMBER Ben Lyon, speaking for himself and not the lobby group, said it is in the interest of Carmel residents that the Village Corner succeed. He claimed beer and wine sales could help the restaurant. In April, the Village Corner applied for and received a permit to extend restaurant hours. Proprietors insist wine and beer sales will aid evening business.

Old Carmel, founded in August 1976 in the Village Corner kitchen, has remained mum on the restaurant's beer and wine permit denial. Old Carmel rallied to save the restaurant from closure two summers ago.

Computer pundit from Carmel tells who needs them

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE NEXT TIME you have surgery, ask your doctor who recommended the operation, the doctor or a computer?

A Carmel resident and nationally acclaimed computer expert says the chances are good your doctor has a computer up his sleeve.

But that's not all.

Dr. Sydney R. Parker, 56, professor of electrical engineering at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, makes it clear that computers are doing a lot more these days than adding numbers.

As Parker figures it, President Carter did not devise his energy program. Nor did his aides. A computer probably did.

Next time you make a plane reservation and a voice tells you to hold the line — don't bother talking back. And don't be fooled into thinking it is a recording, either. Parker will wager, what you are hearing is a computer that mimics perfectly the human voice.

The airline systems are literally driven by computers, claims Parker. One giant computer digests and spews out information on thousands of airline passengers millions of times each day.

•

RIGHT NOW WE are in the middle of a revolution as great as the Industrial Revolution," claims the celebrated professor.

Parker worked on the earliest development of analog and digital computers from 1952 to 1956 while he was project engineer at RCA's advanced development group.

The professor recently was elected a director of what is considered the Phi Beta Kappa of his field — the Electrical Engineering Society, Eta Kappa Nu.

A professor of electrical engineering the past 11 years at the Naval Postgraduate School, Parker previously was the dean at the college of Electrical Engineering at Rutgers University in New York. He also served as an officer in the U.S. Army Signal Corps.

The computer specialist says the question no longer is what a computer can do. The new question: Is there anything left a computer cannot do better and faster than you or I?

•

PARKER ADMITS the most carefully programed computer in the world still has a dickens of a time winning a game of checkers or chess.

Parker compares computer age to industrial revolution

Make any long distance telephone calls lately? If you did, it is not likely the person at the other end heard your voice. What they heard were electrical impulses converting and mimicking your voice, according to Parker.

Next time you are in Denver, Col., you might want to do business with a bank that will flash your checking account balance on your home television screen.

That, too, is done with a computer.

"Through my television set and cable, I can be hooked up to any computer anywhere in the country," says the professor.

Each possibility is reduced to a number. If that possibility is not fed into the com-

The age of computers in every home is here, he says. Every household has at least one digital watch or pocket calculator. Both are computers.

The professor has devoted years to research, writing more than 50 technical papers on electrical engineering. Now, by feeding just a few key words into a Library of Congress computer, the professor says he can find every book ever cataloged on a particular subject.

SOMEDAY, INSTEAD of turning on the 11 p.m. news to catch the weather forecast, you will be turning to a computer, explains Parker. Model weather systems fed into computers help accurately predict weather.

Many cars already have tiny computers that help save fuel. The computer measures the right air-to-fuel ratio, and controls the gasoline.

The days of cash registers have also gone down the tube, says Parker. The friendly girl at Jack-in-the-Box handing you your dinner and change is operating a sophisticated computer.

Don't get afluttered. Matters aren't changing all that fast. They still have to figure out how to computerize the United States mail system. "But they will," the professor says assuredly.

What was the first computer? "The fingers on our hands," answers Parker. Thousands of years ago, our fingers lost out to an even more sophisticated computer, the abacus, he says. An abacus is a frame mounted with beads for counting.

Computers grew bigger and bigger until recent years when Bell Laboratory scientists perfected the transistor. "Now computers are smaller, cheaper and more reliable," Parker says.

You can pick up a pocket calculator for less than $10, or like many banks and airlines, purchase a multimillion-dollar model.

Operating a computer is like driving a car, he says. You can operate one without comprehending its inner workings.

The professor blushes somewhat in noting that the innards of computers are made from the same material many women use to enlarge their breasts — silicon. Whereas the women's operation might cost thousands of dollars, the actual cost of the main computer unit of a pocket calculator is about $1, he says.

THE COMPUTER is a stupid but precise animal. If you write a program, there cannot be any errors," he says.

The professor doesn't believe there is an "ideal" computer. What's more he saw the movie Star Wars and said it "lacked imagination." As far as computers go, "there was nothing new in Star Wars," he says.

CAN YOU FIND the five computer elements in this photo? In the Computer Center at the Naval Postgraduate School, Professor Sydney R. Parker, of Carmel, operates the $1 million device. Element one is the telephone, or signal processer; element two is the computer control panel (at right); element three is the output display unit (behind Parker); element four is the main arithmetic control processing unit; element five is the computer operater and professor of electrical engineering. who, Struve says, urged him to run for the vacant seat, Struve has been identified as someone who would vote much the same way Pruitt has on critical environmental matters.

"If we're both elected," Struve says, "my votes will not be predictable. Jim Pruitt is a good friend of mine, but I will make my own independent decisions.

"I don't have tunnel vision. I am able to think and act after weighing the data and that is what the board needs right now. My votes will neither limit growth nor encourage growth. I'm not against growth. I just don't want it to overtake us.

"We all realize there will be growth in Carmel Valley," Struve says. "I can honestly go down the middle of the road. I think it is our job to listen to the wishes of the majority and to do their bidding."

ON THE QUESTION of growth, Struve says he found the projected 47 per cent population growth figure "startling," and stated flatly: "I wouldn't want to see that. I don't think our roads, water supply and other facilities could stand it.

"The projections are based on facts," he says, "but we don't have to build our plant or make plans to accommodate those percentages."

Of the 20 alternatives for disposal of wastewater discussed at last week's workship, Struve sees agricultural and golf course irrigation as "valid alternatives that are economically feasible. By charging for the water, it provides for some kind of return instead of letting it flow into the bay.

"We should be selling recycled wastewater to the golf courses in Pebble Beach where there is no chance of contamination of the groundwater. This could be a problem if wastewater were used in Carmel Valley."

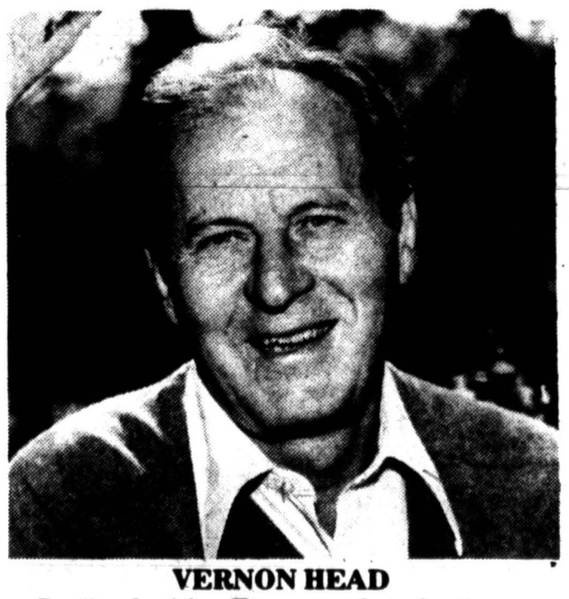
STRUVE WAS impressed by the size of the turnout at the October public workship, and with the high level of interest shown by the persons participating in it.

"The workshop was great," Struve says. "It was a foundation, a beginning. The overwhelming opinion was to do something else with the wastewater — then let's do it," he adds.

"I took as many notes as possible at the workshop," he says, "to see what the people want. Our elected officials are serving the people, so they have got to listen."

Struve has an innovative idea for soliciting opinions from taxpayers in the area. "When something comes up that could directly affect a major portion of the population of the area, the sanitary district should use a questionnaire sent through the mails for guidance." He believes this would be a worthy use of tax funds.

"I love it here," Struve says, "and want to preserve the wonderful things we have. I'm excited that I might have the chance to serve."



VERNON HEAD

Retired Air Force colonel; former executive director, Odello Land Acquisition Fund; member, executive committee, Carmel Meadows Association; active restoring several older homes in Peninsula; elementary and secondary teaching credentials from San Jose State University; aircraft pilot for four years in three different wars.

"THE CARMEL SANITARY District should buy the eastern half of the Odello artichoke ranch (at the mouth of the Carmel River and Highway 1) and use it for land disposal of effluent," declares Vernon Head.

"We need to do something with the water says. "We were given three years to accomplish this by the state of California. Two years have already gone by, so we have only one year left to comply with the mandate."

Head is familiar with the situation regarding the Odello property. He served as executive director of Odello Land Acquisition Fund (OLAF) six years ago. OLAF was successful in raising funds, matched by the state, which led to the purchase of the western 155 acres of the artichoke ranch.

"OLAF saved the west side," Head continues, "but the east side is up for grabs." A plan for the development of the eastern acreage is presently before the Monterey County Planning Commission.

"Disposal of effluent in lakes might even have the additional beneficial effect of heading off salt water intrusion by percolating into the aquifer at the headway of the river. This is presently being done at Half Moon Bay," Head points out.

SHOULD THE DISTRICT look seriously at tertiary treatment? This is the final stage of wastewater treatment that produces water virtually free of bacteria. Costs for this additional stage of treatment would be high.

"I feel the citizens of this area would be willing to pay the additional costs to explore the feasibility of tertiary treatment, or even to buy land. They have shown that they are willing to buy land to preserve and enhance the area," he says, a reference to the formation of a regional park district five years ago.

Head applauds the effort of the sanitary district in attracting citizen participation at last week's workshop. "I have no basis to quarrel with the projection of a 47 per cent increase in population by 1990," Head says, "but I feel we have to be very careful about the rate of development. I fully concur with the efforts of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association to control growth in Carmel Valley. People should be mindful that our economy will suffer if the beauty of the area is altered, because one depends on the other." The tourist business would suffer if the environment of the Peninsula were seriously degraded, he explains.

"It's up to the people to decide," Head adds. "Do we want to continue to develop the area and take chance on ruining it, or hold back and have a jewel of a place?"

Head recalls that he was a frequent visitor to Carmel as long as 30 years ago. "I always left feeling healed. The atmosphere is still here, but the people must work to preserve it," he says.

Head stated flatly that he would "favor and work for a vote of the people before there is any further plant expansion that would increase capacity."

He says he is running for the post because "people must get involved and take part in the process . . . we mustn't adopt the 'Let's let George do it' attitude.

"I hope to contribute to the solution of our problems because of the debt I owe to the community, which has provided me with so much happiness."

JAMES PRUITT

Architect; director, Carmel Sanitary District since 1954; member, Carmel Advisory Board of the Monterey County Planning Commission since 1957; member, Carmel Cultural Commission from 1957 to 1975; member, American Arbitration Board since 1967. Degree from architectural department, Pennsylvania State University in 1936. Officer, U.S. Navy from 1942 to 1954.

PRUITT WAS NOT available for a preelection interview. Reprinted here is a prepared statement about the incumbent candidate.

"I have been a director of the Carmel Sanitary District since 1954. The years of my service were intensively busy years of study and decisions that culminated in the building of our excellent treatment plant. During my tenure as director, I was instrumental in providing excellent and efficient service to the residents and taxpayers of the district with minimum cost. During my incumbency, I was involved with the development of the district master plan to the year 2000. The master plan included, in addition to the present areas within the district, the Carmel Highlands, Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach areas. Presently, I am active in the study of Carmel Bay as an area of special biological significance.

"I am an architect by profession, a graduate of the Pennsylavania State University School of Architecture, and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

"My association with the Carmel area dates back to 1945. I have been active in community affairs. I served on the Carmel Advisory Board of the Monterey County Planning Commission since 1957, and on the Carmel Cultural Commission from 1957 to 1975. I feel that my years of experience as a director, my background as a businessman experienced in budgeting and cost accounting, and my knowledge and love of the Carmel area will be a great asset to me if I am reelected."

Accused coed enters not guilty plea

The accused, Pamela Ann Cox, 19, a student at Monterey Peninsula College, was arrested Monday at 4 p.m. following an investigation by the Carmel Police Department.

Miss Cox allegedly tried to kill Patricia Seablom, 33, also of Carmel, with an overdose of drugs. Police said the alleged attempt occurred Friday at the victim's home on Santa Rita Street. No details were given by the police and the district attorney's office.

Police Chief William Ellis would not comment on the victim's present condition. The victim was not treated at the area's two nonmilitary hospitals, a check of admissions records showed.

Miss Cox entered her plea before Municipal Court Judge Eugene Harrah. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 17.

Swedish actor visits Monterey

Swedish actor and singer Helge Hagerman will present a program of Swedish lyric poetry and songs, Saturday, Nov. 5, 7:30 p.m. at the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies, 440 Van Buren, Monterey. Hagerman will give brief biographical sketches of several well-known Swedish writers, including Carl-Michael Bellman, Gustaf Froding, Dan Andersson, Nils Ferlin and Evert Taeube, with selections of poetry in English and songs in both Swedish and English. Hagerman accompanies himself on the guitar.

He has appeared in many Swedish films and has given more than 1,000 performances of Swedish poetry and music. Currently manager of the Stockholm Park Theater, he is on a tour of the United States sponsored by the Swedish National Theater Center and the American-Scandinavian Foundation.

The program is funded by the Lithgow Osborne Fund of the American-Scandinavian Foundation, which is a publicly-supported, nonprofit organization devoted to educational and cultural exchange between the United States and the five Scandinavian countries.

Storm approaches

SETS OF HUGE waves pounded the local coastline Friday, piling mounds of kelp along Carmel Beach and Stillwater Cove. The swells were pushed by strong winds that carried a rainstorm in from the north. For all the bluster and crash of waves, however, only .12 of an inch of rain was recorded in Carmel. (E. G. Balan photo)

About the Town

AT SUNSET CENTER'S travel film on Greece last week, we learned the Greeks had a tangled traffic problem in their cities. They solved it though. They made all the streets one-way going north. Now Yugoslavia has the traffic problem.

•

IF YOU ARE a namephreaker, clip this one: The guest speaker at the October Men's Garden Club meeting in Carmel was one Terry Root, floriculturist at S and S Nursery in Watsonville.

•

IT'S BAD ENOUGH when people rush the Christmas season, but someone apparently thinks it's almost July. There's a car parked in front of Sunset Center these days with the license plate H MOLL — obviously someone who thinks it's time for the Bach Festival. You did know that that's German for "B minor," as in the Bach Mass in B minor, didn't you?

•

OF COURSE, when the rest of the Festival gets here, the parking lot at Sunset is full of interesting musical license plates: TROMBA, EXULT 8, HI C, 10 OR, TENOR 2. Also saw one that read PUSHY, which a certain soprano says must be yet another tenor.

YOU WILL HURT with laughter if you see the Studio Theater's Play It Again, Sam, a fast-paced Woody Allen comedy in its last week of performances. The lead role, played by Chuck Geber, is done in true Woody Allen style. Geber, who has never studied drama or acted in his life, visited Carmel, and was spotted by director Peter Magee. Magee asked him if he would like to be in a play. Geber said no. Magee talked him into the project anyway. The resemblance of Geber to Woody Allen onstage at times is startling. By day, Geber is an electronics engineer for Hewlett-Packard in Santa Clara.

Gregory Niebel and his new bride, Sylvie Lestrade, also principals in the production, postponed their honeymoon for Play It Again, Sam. After the show closes this weekend, they will be leaving together for . . . well, no one is supposed to know.

A GLOWING METALLIC DISC glided down through the dark pines and hovered over Ocean Avenue. A humming noise changed to silence, and an opalescent shimmering faded to a dull glow as the large craft touched down. Servos whirred as a door appeared; a soft orange light filtered out onto the street.

George Van stumbled out of the bar and saw the strange craft in the moonlight. He reeled backwards and fell into a flowerbed. "Damn." His pickled eyes saw the tall figure step lightly down the ramp, cross the sidewalk and disappear into McFly's.

"Damn, I should get back to those AA meetings," George slurred to no one but himself. He lurched forward and weaved his way over to the starship. First awed, then chuckling quietly, he stumbled up the ramp and disappeared inside.

When the visitor entered the bar, heads turned. Jaws slacked. "That's the best darn costume I've ever seen," said a man wearing a skull mask with a long cloak. "Look at those scales, all those antennae. How did he make his eyes red like that?" asked his date, costumed as Princess Lea in white robes. He didn't say much. He moved like a salamander, if you can imagine a seven-foot salamander in an intrastellar flight suit. As he approached the bar two girls dressed as big mice shrank back to give him room. His clammy hand brushed one's arm. She took a sharp breath and shot a frightened glance at her friend.

The salamander ordered a double drambouie straight. Coolly he appraised the members of the costume party. But he didn't say much, and he didn't move from his stool. You could see the veins in his throat when he swallowed.

The time came for the costume judging. Who else could win? It was no contest. The strange figure's nimble fingers wrapped around the prize money; his tongue flickered across the wide lips; he slid down from the stool and out the door.

George almost squeaked with fright when he saw the being up close. Quickly strong fingers wrenched him around and shoved him down the ramp. He stumbled and fell, hitting his head on the street curb. He didn't hear the thrumming spacedrive rev up inside the ship.

The craft hovered over the pines for 3200 millisecs while its navicomputer calculated the jump to hyperspace. Then in a zip of light it shrank to a pinpoint and was gone.

LET'S PUT NEW LIFE IN THE AIRPORT BOARD...

VOTE FOR WILLIAM A.
CAMPBELL
ELECTION TUESDAY, NOV. 8

Your Peninsula's "Airport Advisory Group" recommends Bill Campbell over the other three candidates because he is the most qualified with "all-over" experience in airport management and flight requirements. The Board today needs new direction to keep our magnificent airport up-to-date with more convenient flight schedules, a safer runway by paving the last 1,000 feet of runway which is already graded and ready to finish, but overlooked by the present Board, and new requirements by the FAA to keep its present safety record.

Academic talk about wine at Napa Valley harvest

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

"SOME OF THE greatest wines of the rld today are being produced in lifornia." The statement was made before audience of 300 Travel/Holiday Award-nning restaurateurs from Canada, United ates and Mexico, lunching al fresco within ent of the harvest at the Greystone inery of the Christian Brothers in St. elena.

The speaker was Dr. Maynard A. merine, emeritus-chairman of the partment of viticulture and enology of e University of California at Davis. efore Dr. Amerine's extravagant words e attributed to natural chauvinism, it is sential to know that he enjoys a position acclaim among winemakers around the orld for his total objectivity and con-rvative stance as an academician. His mments are always eagerly awaited, not ly for their definitive wisdom, but as ten for their wry humor, a quality which akes him in perpetual demand as a peaker.

(It is pertinent here to mention that, mong the many books authored by Dr. merine, his volume, Wine — An Introduction for Americans, first published in 965 by the University of California Press, ith V. L. Singleton, updated and reprinted n both hardback and paperback, remains mong the most valuable and illuminating exts for both novice and connoisseur ranks f wine-lovers.)

THE AUTUMNAL HARVEST event gathered the audience into the Napa Valley rom distant places. For many, it was the irst visit to a California winery. And for ne of the celebrated New Yorkers, it was even the first time beyond the Mississippi! For the Napa Valley winemakers it was a perfect captive audience — America's most celebrated restaurateurs, premium vendors of their premium products.

The three-day visit was filled with a joyous urgency. Morning, noon and night were scheduled with seminars, tastings, winery visits and lavish dinners, all designed to acquaint the visitors with this heartland of California wine country.

The springboard for Dr. Amerine's above-quoted statement came from his properly assessed conclusion, that to many of his listeners there remained a question about the true place of California wines in qualitative ranking.

"Shortly after the turn of the century," he said, "the Impressionist paintings of Picasso, Matisse, Manet, Renoir and others were available at very reasonable prices. Only the Russians recognized their potential value with extensive and provident purchasing. The later international buyers paid the higher prices. Some of the greatest wines of the world today are being produced in California. I would hope that the same mistake would not be made in recognition of this comparable opportunity."

It was a remarkable analogy. Beyond the inevitable comparison of California wines with their European prototypes, the visitors' next question might be, "But those California wines are so hard to obtain; there is so little." The obvious answer is, of course, there's not much Mouton, Lafite, Latour or Romanee-Conti of prize vintage either. These are "collectors' items." As such, they should be seized and cellared when available. With time, they are enhanced in value.

Witness, for instance, some of the liveliest bidding at the Ninth Premiere National Auction of Rare Wines conducted by Heublein in New Orleans this past May centering around lots of Beaulieu Cabernet Sauvignon Private Reserve vintages from 1939 to 1974, and Inglenook from 1887 to 1973.

TO WINE CONNOISSEURS, once alerted to the potential treasures from the state's many viticultural regions, further questions inevitably occur: "Which is the best winery?" or "Which is the best region?" and even "Which is the largest winery?"

In the seminar sessions (despite the Napa Valley locale) the answer was given to each of those questions: there is no one best winery, best region; and in the semantics of size, small is not necessarily an indication of fine quality, and large means neither good nor bad, as we've often cited here. The style, skill, talent and total dedication of the winemaker makes the quality difference.

•

NEXT STOP: the Robert Mondavi Vineyard Room, where the assembled guests tasted, with Louis P. Martini, his 1969 Private Reserve Zinfandel against his 1974 Zinfandel, for the obvious differences brought about in complexity by age alone. Our host explained that the only difference in the wines, accounting for the "Private Reserve" appellation of the older wine, was age itself.

Review of 'Company'

Demanding script is played out superbly

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

THE STEPHEN SONDHEIM-George Furth show Company, now playing at the Barnyard Theatre in Carmel, demonstrates the old theater axiom that there are no small parts. The witty musical demands more than a dozen good players, and in this production it gets them.

As the lead, Robert, Bob Lester conveys the ambivalence toward marriage that characterizes the whole play. His strongest moments express conflicting emotions: one time sincere longing for someone to share his life, another time sudden panic at the realization that he might have found her.

His married friends demonstrate some of the good reasons for such ambivalence. Wendy Goldman and Harrison Shields, both fine singers, are brilliant as a couple exquisitely attuned to each other's weaknesses who goad each other into a karate match that expresses the violence of both their anger and their sexuality — and that is uproariously funny.

Tina Paradiso is so animated and intense that she makes her "first grass" scene as fresh and hilarious as if the idea hadn't been done to death years ago. She is so vivid a presence that it is hard to watch anyone else when she is onstage. Thomas R. Sanchez is touching as the husband who cannot admit to himself that she might not be the "dumb, square" girl he thought he had married.

Roberta Sengstack, who has another fine voice, is appealingly vulnerable as the crazy Amy, who may be sane only at the moment when she refuses to marry the devoted Bruce Tuthill, or only at the moment when she does.

LAVONNE RAE ANDREWS adds enough ironic depth to her characterization of the rich, blase Joanne to keep the role from degenerating into caricature. Ken Crockett, as her "third or fourth" husband, is a convincingly nice guy, suggesting repeatedly by gesture and tone that more than his money keeps Joanne with him.

The three women in Bobby's life are ably played by Jeannie M. Hughes, Jo Linda Sorci and C. J. McArthur. As Marta, Jeannie M. Hughes is a slick, deliberately "big city" woman with a naive longing for sophistication. This is a big departure from her usual roles, and one that shows real growth in her acting ability. As April, C. J. McArthur is a touching innocent. Jo Linda Sorci is a good dancer, but her solo was less interestingly choreographed than the ensemble numbers. In fact, some of the best scenes were those in which the whole company was onstage. They worked together with a precision that bespoke many hours of exacting rehearsal. Fred Weiss is well known here already for the excellence of his direction and choreography. In this show, his touch is apparent in both the professionalism of the large-ensemble numbers and the attention to telling details, the small gestures that can reveal more about a character than a dozen lines.

THE ONLY WEAK spot in this polished production is the orchestra. It is ambitious to have half a dozen instruments instead of the lone piano that one often finds in local theaters, but the orchestra seemed to have trouble coordinating with the singers. This may have been due to the unusual placement, above and behind the stage. Music was not always audible during the ensembles, being somewhat overpowered by the wealth of strong voices.

But physical details always can be worked out. The talent and professionalism of this group make one sure that they will be.

Sherrill Milnes

Met baritone to sing Wednesday

Metropolitan Opera baritone Sherrill Milnes will sing at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, Wednesday, Nov. 9, at 8 p.m. in a concert presented by the Carmel Music Society.

Milnes made his Metropolitan Opera debut 10 years ago, and has since performed leading roles in the world's great opera houses: London's Covent Garden, the Vienna Staatsoper, the Paris Opera, the Chicago Lyric, the San Francisco Opera, the Teatro Colon of Buenos Aires and the Hamburg, Munich and Berlin Staatsopers.

At the Metropolitan Opera, Milnes has sung in many operas, including Luisa Miller, La Gioconda, La Forza del Destino, The Barber of Seville, I Pagliacci, I Vespri Siciliani, Otello, Il Trovatore, Macbeth and, recently, a triumphant Don Giovanni.

After his performance of Don Giovanni, Harold Schonberg of the New York Times wrote, "Not since Ezio Pinza has there been a Don of comparable size, command and sexiness," and Irving Kolodin of SR/World said, "First Pinza, then Siepi, now Milnes."

The program will include selections by Marcello, Brahms, Tchaikovsky, Duparc, Copland, Duke, Warlock and Jordan.

Milnes has recorded some 30 albums, issued by RCA, London and Angel Records, including La Traviata, which won the Grand Prix de Paris; Cosi Fan Tutte, which won the NARAS Award for the best opera recording of 1968; Il Trovatore, which won the 1971 Edison Award; and Il Tabarro, which won the Premio della Critica Discografica Italiana Award in 1972.

The Illinois-born baritone has sung at many American festivals including Grant Park and Ravinia, Illinois, Wolf Trap Farm in Virginia, Tanglewood, the Hollywood Bowl and the Ambler Festival in Pennsylvania. He regularly appears with the major orchestras in the United States, does national recital tours and has been a frequent guest on network talk shows and television specials.

Concert tickets, at $6, $5.25 and $4.50, may be reserved through the Carmel Music Society, 624-2085.

Hudson River School exhibit opens in Pebble Beach

'he largest and most representative ibit of Hudson River School paintings on West Coast in 40 years opened Friday, . 28, at the Pebble Beach branch of erie de Tours, opposite Del Monte lge on 17-Mile Drive, Pebble Beach. The ibit of 26 paintings will remain on view ough Nov. 13.

'he show includes works by in- nationally famous artists Thomas Cole, ıer Durand, Jasper Cropsey, Thomas ughty, George Inness and others.

The Hudson River School, the major luence on the American art scene from 1820s to the 1870s, was the first truly ive American school of painting. The dson River artists painted landscapes ng the Hudson, as well as many other as in the American wilderness, with the ep reverence for nature characteristic of 19th century.

Robert J. Kaller, owner of Galerie de urs, says, "They were curiously akin to . the men of that time so long ago. The mmon man believed in the purity of the tural environment in a way that we have st rediscovered — and the Hudson River inters expressed this belief perfectly.

"Another important element in their ork was the challenge of an untamed land. his was a challenge that they responded to id attempted to meet in their majestic nvases and subject matter. Above all, ere was a feeling that the beauty of the ild was literally a 'gift of God.' "

The Galerie de Tours show includes intings by many of the leaders of the udson River School.

• Thomas Cole, often considered the ounder of the native landscape school, ame to the United States in 1818 and ettled in Ohio. He began painting in 1820 nd was for several years an itinerant ortrait painter. He later moved to Penn- ylvania and then New York. His works are included in collections of the Metropolitan and National Galleries as well as many others.

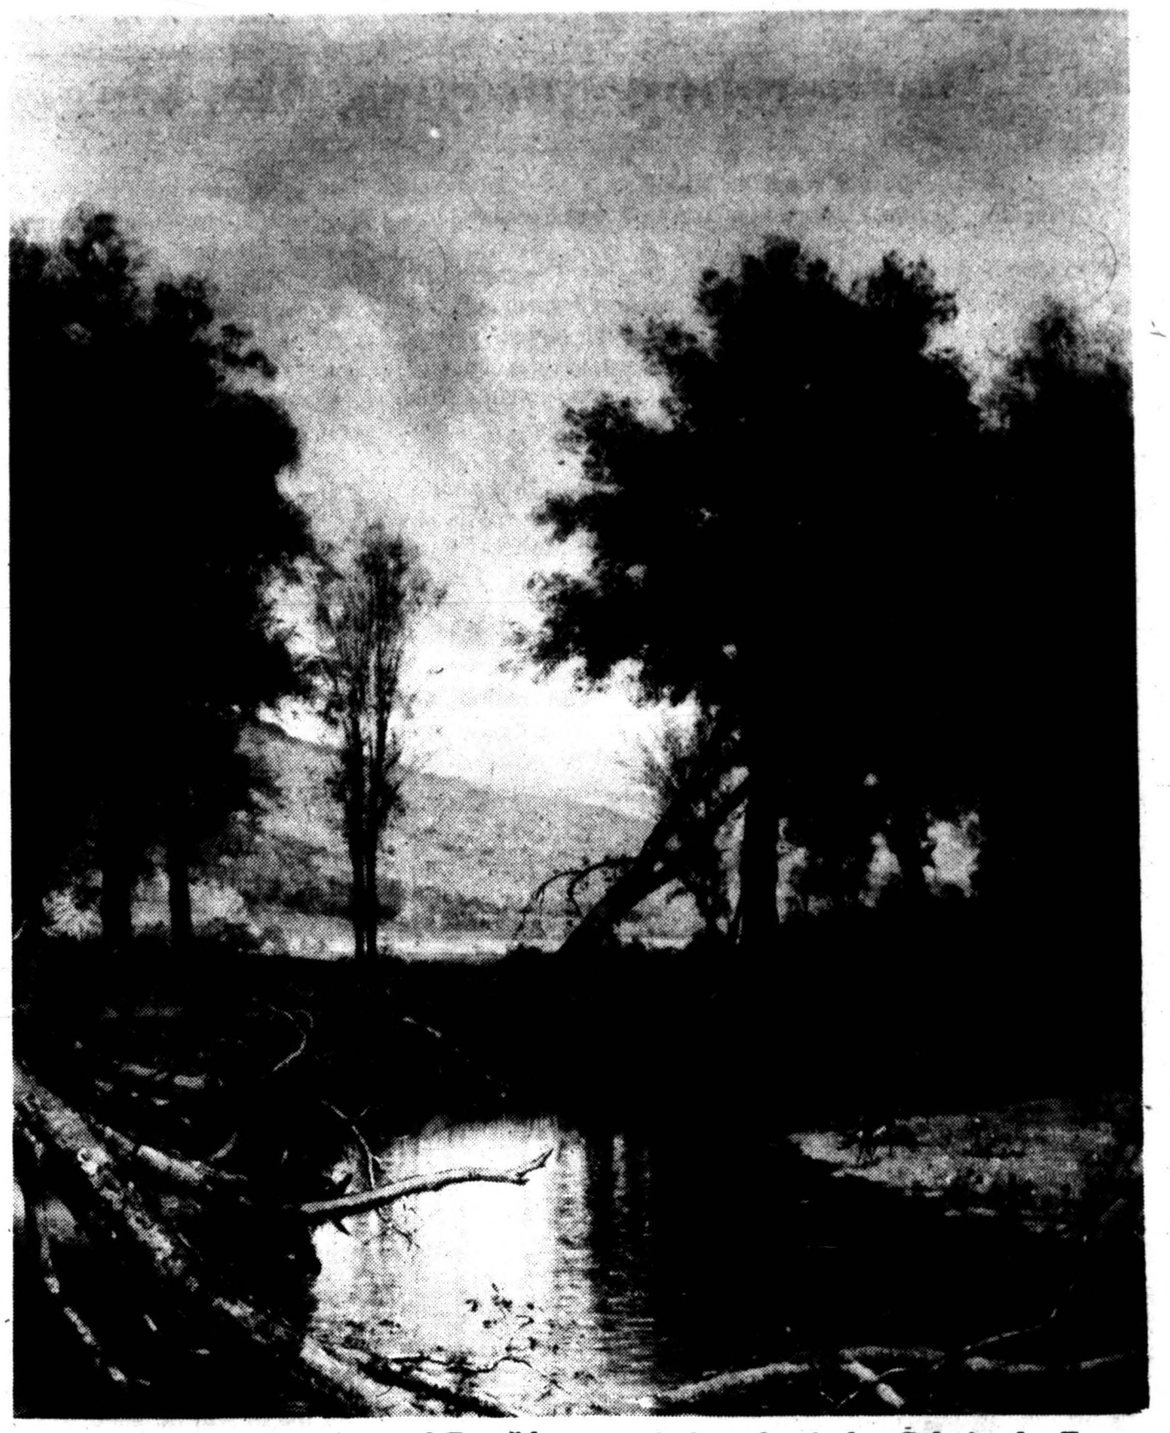
• Asher Durand, widely regarded as a leader of the Hudson River School, studied engraving in his father's shop. He engraved John Trumbull's famous painting The Declaration of Independence and exhibited every year for 50 years in the National Academy shows. He began to specialize in landscape painting about 1837 and painted landscapes exclusively after his Grand Tour of Europe in 1840. He was extremely important as an example and as a theorist for the second wave of Hudson River School painters.

• Thomas Doughty, one of the first Americans to devote himself exclusively to landscape painting, exhibited regularly at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts as well as in Boston and at the National Academy in New York. His work is both charming and poetic, and he gained a wide regard for quiet pastoral scenes.

• Jasper Cropsey, best known for his autumnal landscapes, began to paint the White Mountains and the Catskills as a young man. He made two extended trips to Europe and stayed in England for six years. When he returned, he settled permanently in Hastings, N.Y. His rich handling of paint reflects the influence of Thomas Cole.

• George Inness, one of the ablest and most prolific landscape painters, grew up in New York City and studied with the itinerant painter John Barker before being apprenticed to engravers Sherman and Smith. He was a frequent European traveler in both Italy and France, a contemporary and associate of both Albert Bierstadt and Frederick E. Church, and is represented in both the Metropolitan and the National Galleries.

The gallery is open 10:30 a.m.-5 p.m. every day except Tuesday. For more information, phone 624-5355.



"LANDSCAPE with Stream and Deer" by Worthington Woodridge is one of the paintings included in the largest and most representative exhibit of Hudson River School paintings on the West Coast in 40 years. The show will open at the Pebble Beach branch of the Galerie de Tours, Friday, Oct. 28. Included are works by Thomas Cole, Asher Durand, Jasper Cropsey, Thomas Doughty and George Inness.

ON WEDNESDAY at 8 p.m. a special person will be performing at Sunset Theater under the auspices of the Carmel Music Society. Sherrill Milnes, leading baritone with the Metropolitan Opera Company, will present a program of opera arias and songs. Sherrill has been an international figure in opera and recital work for the past 10 years. Previous to that, he appeared with smaller opera companies, sang with many musical organizations, and performed in Chicago where he lived for many years. I first met Sherrill when we both sang in a small choir and we spent many hours together talking about our future plans. He always wanted to perform and my efforts were directed more toward production and administration of the arts programing. Now Sherrill Milnes will be singing on the stage of Sunset Theater. He is a fine musician and a great performer. Perhaps you can still get tickets by phoning 624-2085.

Sunset Center performance

An intimate evening of music with the Bulgarian Quartet

By AL EISNER

HOW FORTUNATE WE ARE to enjoy intimate performances of chamber music in Carmel by some of the world's finest chamber ensembles made possible by the untiring efforts of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society.

The Society brought the Bulgarian Quartet to Sunset Center Saturday night as the opening recital of the 1977-'78 season. It was a memorable evening of music making. The group played three quartets of varying difficulty with a mellowness and polish that can only be found among groups that have played together for many years.

All four are teachers at the Conservatory of Sofia, where they met and formed the ensemble 21 years ago. The same four musicians have played together continuously since that time.

•

THE EVENING BEGAN with an impeccable performance of Franz Schubert's Quartet in A minor. Heavily chromatic and full of complex rhythms, the work is more subdued than many of Schubert's earlier compositions. It was written during a period when he was troubled by illness and unhappy love affairs.

The opening movement, announced with a sad, song-like opening theme, was played beautifully. It evolved, in turn, into music that was pensive, anguished, almost tormented. The composer's buoyant spirit, however, prevailed at the end.

The familiar theme of the second movement was also used as the entr'acte after the third act of his music for the ballet, Rosamunde. Although the Quartet played in a mellow, relaxed manner, they exercised restraint by never allowing themselves to overplay.

The skillful interpretation of the third movement evoked visions of a lone couple dancing in a misty grand ballroom of long ago. The plaintive sounds contrasted brilliantly with the playful, joyful mood of the fourth movement. The Quartet played with a lovely transparency — with just a hint of the Slavic origin of the players, perhaps? They tossed off tricky passages in a triumph of effortless, ensemble playing, especially when called upon to play four different rhythms against each other. The appreciative audience responded with generous applause.

AS THOUGH BOWING to their big brothers to the east, the Bulgarian Quartet chose a short work by Shostakovich for the middle of the program. Written in 1960, the F sharp major is full of content, despite its brevity, and has been described as a mature work of a great master. The Bulgarian Quartet attacked its difficult atonal passages expertly, creating almost excruciating tension.

The four played the difficult final movement with relish. The onrushing power of the fugue was executed alternately by four, three, then two instruments. After repeating the themes of the irst and second movements and climaxing in crashing sounds, the quartet ends quietly, almost unobtrusively.

It was a breathtaking performance of an unfamiliar work that was incandescent in its playing, and therefore comprehensible to the audience.

SCHUMANN'S QUARTET in A major gave the Bulgarian Quartet an opportunity to show its considerable ability to play romantic works with restraint.

The last of three quartets written to honor Felix Mendelssohn, it was composed in the same year as the popular Piano Quintet in E flat. The Quartet played the sweeping, romantic first movement with a mature sound that is best described as mellow, lush, rich. The difficult syncopations of the second movement, led first by the cello, then by the viola, was a fine example of true ensemble playing. The fugal quality of some of the passages in this movement showed Schumann's debt to Bach. The Quartet responded with wonderfully spirited playing.

The group's interpretation of the Adagio proved it can handle "schmaltz" too . . . the material was treated reverently, but without awe. The majestic triplets of the finale were played flawlessly, leading to the joyful climax that brought several "Bravos!" from the audience.

WE WERE LUCKY to be seated in the first row, and although we tried to observe closely, could not see members of the quartet sending "signals" to start or stop. Is it because they are so familiar with the work or because they have played together for so long? No matter . . . it was a superb evening of music.

Although tickets are difficult to get (the Society limits membership to maintain the intimate atmosphere) music lovers should make plans to see the Stuttgart Trio (Nov. 25); the Nash Ensemble (Feb. 24); the Tokyo String Quartet (March 9); and the Trio Concertante (April 4). Ticket prices are surprisingly moderate for music of such consistently high quality.

Barbershop singers appear this weekend

The Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA), will present its annual concerts Friday and Saturday, Nov. 4-5, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. Both programs begin at 8 p.m.

The 50-man Cypressaires chorus will perform as well as The Aliens, a comedy quartet; the Montagne Sisters; and the chapter's quartets, The Fat City Four and the Del Monte Four-Est.

Tickets are available at Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey; Lily Walker Music, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; and the Julia Marlowe Box Office in Sunset Center.

Scientist teaches typing

Teacher breaks 'type cast' in the typing pool

By JIM BARRETT

HE'S HILARIOUS. He's outstanding. This man has put such enthusiasm in that class," said Allura Fishburn, librarian at Carmel Middle School.

Her praise was for Albert C. Kolb, 57, who spent 11 years there as a science teacher. When he returned from a two-year sabbatical in 1975, he found the school needed no science teacher, but it did need a typing instructor.

Carmel Pine Cone
SECTION II

Kolb himself had not learned to type until he was 45. Until he was reassigned, his work on a typewriter was done grudgingly and on a casual basis.

He soon found after school opened in September that his typing difficulties were no different from the seventh and eighth graders he taught.

"Nothing worked. The existing machine is an archaic oxcart. It is designed for failure. You have to be ambidextrous or a left-handed athlete to make one of these go," said Kolb peering down at a worn typewriter.

The scientist in Kolb led him to search out a better idea. He found it. He read of experiments during the Depression by a Seattle professor who rearranged the conventional typewriter keyboard with some intriguing results.

Dr. August Dvorak, a professor at the University of Washington, invented the keyboard in 1932. It placed the five vowels next to each other on the left side. On the standard keyboard, they are scattered. The design was aimed at minimizing finger travel.

By actual measurement, a typist's fingers travel about 29 miles a day. Using the Dvorak keyboard, now dubbed the American Simplified Keyboard, travel was cut to one-mile.

Moreover, the work is shifted to the right hand using the ASK keyboard, easing the muscle chores of typing, according to Kolb. "Most people in this country are right-handed, yet we still type on machines where 60 per cent of the work has to be done with the left hand," he said.

•

FOR BEGINNING TYPISTS, the ASK system is easier to master than the conventional keyboard, he said. To his disappointment, however, only five pupils have received parent permission to use the ASK machine during the past year.

"This is an academic community," Kolb said, resigning himself to the same public reluctance that Dvorak met with his early machines.

Kolb said the ASK machines make typing easier for youngsters, but in class he refrains from the evangelic fervor he displays talking about the system in his off hours.

What Kolb has done to encourage student typing is to give them assignments with meaning, jobs that ordinarily would be performed by wage-earning employees.

In the library, for instance, Kolb's classes type the daily overdue-book list. "There are 80 to 90 books due each day. It used to take me at least 45 minutes a day and I was going like thunder," said Mrs. Fishburn, the librarian.

Last school term, another class spent its time sharpening skills by typing letters to 599 overseas government information agencies. They obtained the mailing list from a book and virtually every agency returned to the school color brochures and books about the nations. Mrs. Fishburn filled four file drawers with the booklets.

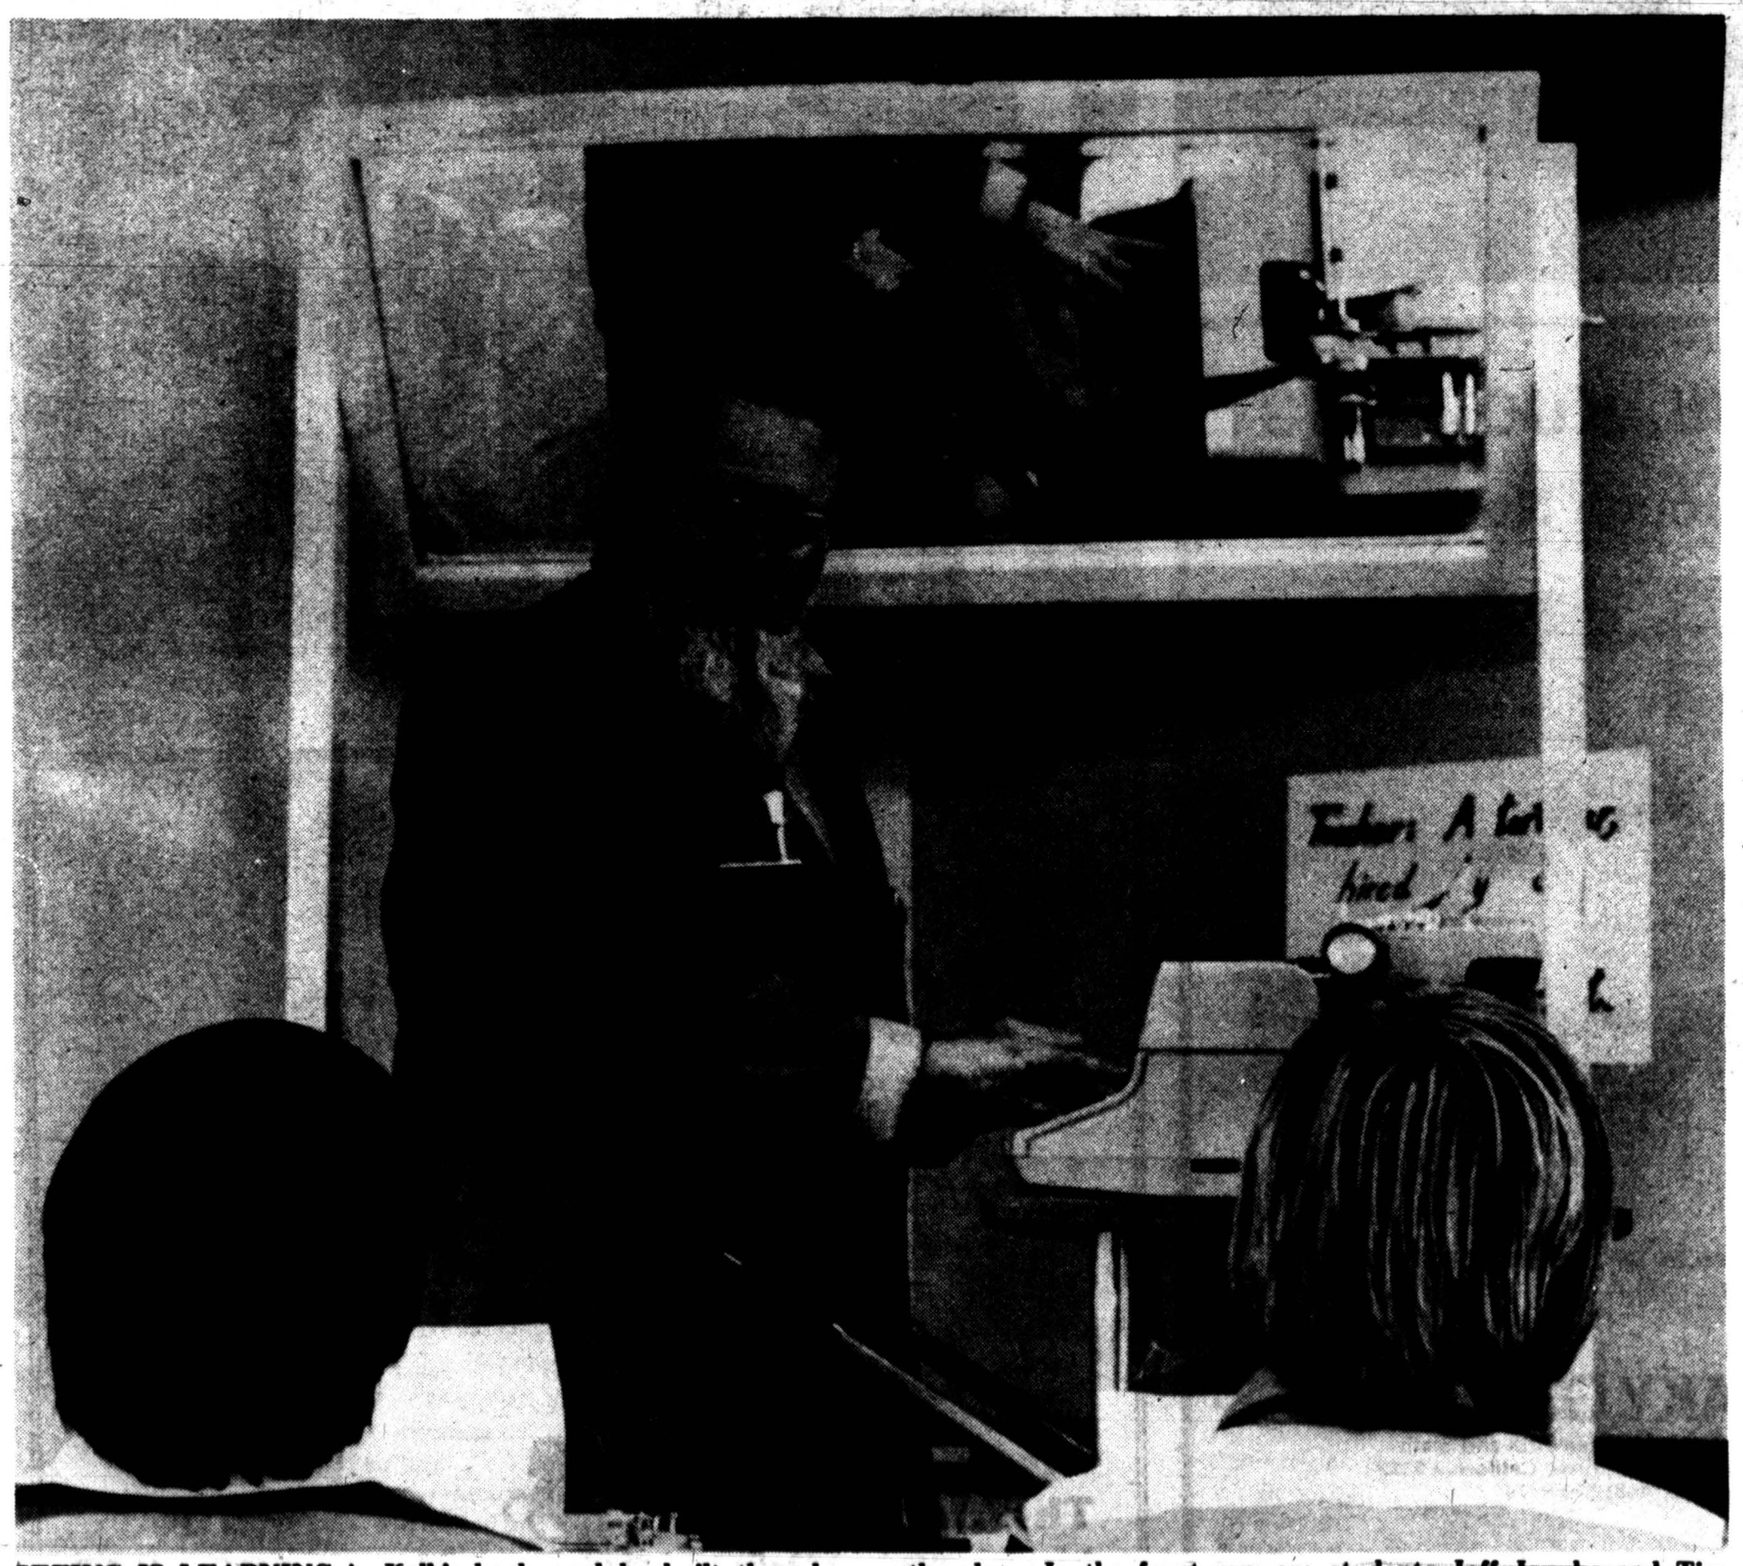
TRACY HOGAN, 12, like many other of Kolb's students, gets class credit and a grade for doing typing for her teachers.

SOME CHILDREN could not assume the proper posture for typing because the classroom desks were too high. Trey Whipple had to place his feet on a stack of textbooks until Kolb decided to hacksaw the desk supports. In some cases, he lowered desks as much as five inches.



SEEING IS LEARNING in Kolb's book, and he built the adjustable mirror for that purpose. It reflects his hand positioning to the class. In the front row are students Jeff Jayubo and Tim Anger.

His motto: Don't give them busy work

Two weeks ago, for example, she spent three hours retyping a slate of questions dittoed and given to her English course. The questions were required homework as part of biographical reading about Helen Keller.

"I want the kid to feel the work is valuable," Kolb said, pulling at his suspenders. "If it winds up in the trash bin, then it was just junk work."

His combination of typing instruction and the work ethic has brought some mild rewards. Kolb said the work of his students led Carmel Unified School District to give him $1,000 for new typewriters.

Equipment in good repair is necessary for typing instruction, he said. So is a comfortable desk, as he explained.

•

WHEN KOLB STARTED the typing courses, he found several of the pupils could not touch the floor. "I found a couple of kids who were handy and had them hacksaw some of the legs on the desks. In a few cases, they took off as much as five and a half inches," said Kolb.

All of this science-turned-typing teacher's dedication leads up to one thing. Raising a pen in his hand, Kolb said, "My education goal is to have these machines replace this."

Remember When?

50 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 4, 1927:

HALLOWEEN GAIETY

One false alarm for the Carmel Fire Department; soap on all Ocean Avenue windows; one man arrested under suspicion; loud tooting of automobile horns; a caravan of motorcycles on the highway; half-grown ghosts on the streets; one burnt jack o'lantern in the Dolores Avenue gutter — these are a few of the events that kept Chief of Police August Englund and his two deputies busy last Monday night, All Hallow's Eve.

CARMEL WILL BE PUT IN A BOOK BY WOMAN IT PUT IN JAIL

Mrs. Grace Potter, awaiting trial for defrauding an Ocean Avenue merchant, is writing a book which will show Carmel to the world as it truly is. The book, being written in the county jail, is Carmel's first expose.

This will be Mrs. Potter's first book, except checkbooks.

Mrs. Potter is a versatile woman of many talents, some of which she used effectively in Carmel during her stay here, gathering material for her book and her wardrobe trunk.

She is charged with defrauding a merchant of a large bill of dress goods.

It was while she was in this village that she absorbed — together with other things — the ambition to be a writer. She has been a fictionist for many years.

It has not yet been determined under which of her names the story will be published.

JOHN DOE "FLOATED"

"John Doe," ubiquitous Ulysses of the underworld, paid a brief visit to Carmel last night. Early this morning, he was escorted to Monterey city jail by Chief of Police August Englund and today was notified that his best interests demanded an immediate change of scenery. He took the suggestion.

EVERY LITTLE MOVEMENT

More clubs, not fewer and stronger, seems to be the trend in Carmel. At the present writing, apart from churches and political and business organizations, there are these clubs: Monzanita Club, Arts and Crafts Club, Reading Circle, Parent Teachers Association, Red Cross, Carmel Masonic Club, Playreaders, League for Peace and Freedom, Womens Club, Art Association and Carmel Music Club.

Frankly, these are too many clubs for so small a town. A little common sense will reduce the number and improve the quality — and save duplication.

25 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 7, 1952:

According to the owner, there's nothing to the fable that the left tastes better than the right. "The sign is just a business-getter," Bob said.

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 9, 1967:

VIETNAM CASUALTY

Lt. Robert Fergusson, only child of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert G. Fergusson, died in Tokyo recently of wounds received in Vietnam last month while trying to save his company commander.

HIPPIES CHAMPIONED

Mr. Sam Karas, of Monterey, championed the hippy and pop musical presentations in a talk to Carmel Rotary Club Wednesday. I interpreted his speech to the effect that the adult just doesn't want to understand these youths' lack of responsibility, morals, discipline, cleanliness and disappointment with the society presented to them.

My reaction is that I am grateful such young people represent a minority of our young people.

VERNON L. HEAD

Vote for Vernon Head -- mature, experienced -- for the Carmel Sanitary District Board November 8, 1977.

Vernon Head, a retired Air Force Colonel, has served his country well and is now willing to serve his community.

He amply demonstrated his concern for the quality of life in this area by extensive leadership work for OLAF, a few years ago.

Energetic, with ample time for the task, he will bring to it fresh ideas and much common sense. We believe this is an unusual opportunity for Carmel citizens to place integrity and competence in public office.

Pending Highlands development

Planners ask lid on number of motel guests

OCCUPANCY SHOULD be restricted at a proposed Carmel Highlands motel because of its limited sewage disposal facilities, the Monterey County Planning Department said last week.

The occupancy limit, two guests per room, was mentioned in the environmental impact report released last week about the proposed 18-suite Peter Pan Lodge. In the report, planners underscored the limited water supply and sewage treatment facilities at the site. The Highlands area has no sewers and the motel developers said they would use a leaching field for waste.

The report has been filed in Sacramento for state review. No hearing on its findings has been scheduled but a source in the planning department said it could be slated as early as December.

The developer of the project is Gilroy-based Gurries Management Co., owners of the Tickle Pink Motor Inn. On Jan. 13, County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon ordered the environmental impact report on the Gurries project.

The lodge would be situated on 3.3 acres along Peter Pan Road, just east of Highway 1. It would extend into Wildcat Canyon. The company owns an adjoining acre that would be used for leaching sewage from the lodge, said Ronald V. Gurries, a general partner. He said the company has a desire to expand to 30 units, but declined to say when permission for expansion might be asked.

IF WE DON'T get a good rain, I wouldn't want to build at all. If there is no water, that's not reasonable," Gurries said Friday in a telephone interview.

In the impact report, county planning officials said the lodge would have no reliable water source until rationing is lifted. The site is served by California-American Water Co., which is enforcing a ration plan. The flow is measured by a five-eighths-inch meter, commonly used on single-family houses.

Commenting in the report, the County Health Department said, "Certainly this size meter would be incapable of supplying adequate water flow for an 18-unit motel. It has been proposed that a storage tank be installed on the property to provide the required water with an in-house pressurized system. Such an arrangement has not been allowed in other areas of the California-American system since the ban on new connections and seems inappropriate here."

Gurries said the lodge would require no more than 2,000 gallons a day, excluding water for landscaping. The county mentioned daily figures of from 1,800 to 2,160 gallons.

•

IN ITS REPORT, the planning department said Gurries must provide a reliable alternative water source. Gurries proposed installing a 30,000-gallon pressurized tank to store water, but in the interview Friday he said a tank able to hold 2,000 gallons would be adequate. He said the lodge instead might seek approval to build a swimming pool that could hold about 30,000 additional gallons.

The reserve water is required for firefighting. Gurries said he could expect 2,400 gallons a day from the California-American pipeline and also would be able to tap the swimming pool in an emergency.

The lodge would be situated two miles from the Carmel Highlands Fire Department, about five minutes' driving time away. The fire department will require a 500-gallon-per-minute flow sustained for one hour, according to the report.

The trustees of the Carmel Friends of Photography have announced that James Alinder will become executive director of the group on Jan. 1.

Alinder comes to Carmel from Lincoln, Neb., where he was head of the Art Department photography program at the University of Nebraska. He had been in the post since 1968. He is the current national chairman of the Society for Photographic Education and has been the editor of the organization journal, Exposure, for the past five years.

Alinder has studied at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., and at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. In 1968, he received the first MFA degree in photography and art history awarded by the University of New Mexico. He has had over 50 exhibitions

Alinder succeeds James L. Enyeart, who will become the director of the Center for Creative Photography at the University of Arizona on Jan. 1.

Second son for the Newmans

"He's great fun," mom says of newborn Robinson Heffelfinger Newman. Robinson, the second son for Virginia and Michael Newman of Carmel, was delivered Oct. 14.

The eight-pound, two-ounce baby boy has a two-year-old brother, Michael. Robinson was delivered at Community Hospital. His grandmother had visited here during the final week of Virginia's pregnancy.

Rare typing class

He has gone so far as to title the course "Mechanical Writing."

Kolb said he labored long hours writing reports for his master's degree. The work was done in longhand. "I'd have to hire a typist and wait until she had finished. It was wasted time," he declared.

HE PERSONALLY USES the ASK keyboard because it saves him time and labor. Asked if it was practical in the work world, given the fact virtually every office uses the so-called "Qwerty," or standard typewriter, Kolb provided a hard-nosed business answer.

"The carpenter, the mechanic, the plumber takes his own tools to the job and gets a nice tax deduction for it. Why not the typist? There is this business image, however, that women must comply with the equipment the boss provides."

Why is the simplified keyboard superior? Kolb reached for his grade book and translated the small pencil marks and red checks into the bottom line:

"I have had students, just beginners, use the ASK system and within nine days they can type 16 correct words per minute for five consecutive minutes," he said.

"The rest are on the standard keyboard. The most I can expect is 15 to 20 words, but that takes at least seven weeks."

Japanese drama scheduled Saturday

Benkei at the Bridge, one act from a long Kabuki play first performed in 1731 in Japan, will be presented by Leonard Pronko and Takao Tomono, Saturday, Nov. 5, 8 p.m. at the Monterey Peninsula College Theater, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

The flamboyant drama is presented almost entirely in dance with a brief passage of dialogue. The drama depicts the first meeting of the prominent heroes of Japanese history and legend. Benkei, a seasoned warrior and priest, goes to the Gojo Bridge every night and engages passersby in combat, hoping to find a nobleman to serve. For 99 nights he wins each battle, but on the 100th night he encounters a nobleman who first pretends to be a woman but finally beats Benkei, thus proving himself to be a worthy master.

During the program, Pronko, a professor of romance languages at Pomona College in Claremont, and Tomono, a native of Tokyo, will present a demonstration of Kabuki makeup and costume preparation. They will also explain the historical background of Kabuki theater and the preparations necessary before a performance.

Council gets advice on ousting commissioners

A DETAILED METHOD by which the Carmel City Council could oust its appointed commission members has been submitted for a council vote on Monday.

No city commissioners ever have been removed from the non-pay posts, said City Attorney George Brehmer, but the council's power over the commissions needs to be clarified. There is no ordinance in Carmel that explains how a commissioner can be ousted.

"It's not really a change," said Brehmer, who drafted the proposed law. He said the council can fire any commissioner with a minimum three-vote majority.

•

THE ORDINANCE also spells out when a commissioner could be removed for being a nonresident. A move of a member's residence causing less than a majority of the commission to be residents of Carmel would lead to the member's ouster under the proposed ordinance.

When former Planning Commissioner Paul Sletton moved from Carmel to Hacienda Carmel in Carmel Valley last spring, it caused a furor.

Brehmer told Sletton his move forced him to resign. A closer reading of the city code, however, led Brehmer to reverse his opinion. He informed Sletton that he could legally complete his term.

Although Sletton's term was to last until May 1979, he resigned in August because, he said, the commissioners had preconceived views on issues.

The purpose of the proposed ordinance is to clarify the powers of City Council, said Brehmer. The mayor makes all commission appointments. A council majority must concur, however.

The ordinance also would set annual dates when new commissioners would be seated and when panelists are assigned to specific subcommittees.

•

ALSO ON THE COUNCIL'S docket are more than 20 varied issues — among them the so-called "second kitchen" issue.

Many Carmel single-family dwellings have been illegally converted into multiple dwellings by adding kitchens. Each single-family dwelling can have only one "food preparation" area, according to a 1929 city ordinance.

The City Council will consider a policy, details of which were not available Monday, regarding illegal conversions.

A mid-year budget review also will be scheduled for later in the month at the Monday meeting.

When the City Council adopted its $2.6 million budget in August, newly appointed City Administrator Jack Collins apologized to the council for the budget document's form. He said, "It will never be this way again."

HALLOWEEN'S SPIRIT hangs on with the Carmel High School student production of "Count Dracula," which opens tonight on campus. Bob Dunn plays the vampire and Alana Bernardi plays Mina, whom he stalks by night. Tickets to the debut and the repeat performances Friday and Saturday are $1.75, or $1 for students. The play will be repeated Nov. 10, 11 and 12. Curtain time is 8 p.m. for all shows. They will be staged in the Pawnshop Theater on campus.

D. Kaye Chandler, President and Project Director of Carmel Valley Ranch Company has announced that effective November 1, 1977, Samuel F.B. Morse III was appointed Vice President in charge of Construction. Mr. Morse received his Bachelor's degree in Architecture from Cal. Poly, and has been a self-employed General Contractor on the Peninsula for the last seven years.

Mr. Chandler also wishes to announce that Miss Kim Baker who resides in Carmel Valley has been appointed Secretary/Treasurer.

PARTY PLANS

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

Having had Prince Charles in our midst, our minds turn to British fare. While the best of all is rib roast of beef with Yorkshire pudding, there also are typical vegetales such as Brussels sprouts and carrots. New potatoes always are included, well scrubbed, with a notch around the centers.

Rolled Rib Roast of Beef with Yorkshire Pudding: Wash a rolled roast with a damp towel. Put it fat side up in an open pan on a rack. Season with salt and pepper. Roast, uncovered, at 300 degrees allowing from 28 to 32 minutes per pound for rare meat, or 38 minutes per pound for medium rare, which seems to be the general preference. Allow meat to stand about 30 minutes before serving. This permits the meat to absorb its own juices and makes it easier to carve. Meat drippings may be used for gravy or the famed pudding. Pour them into an 11"-by-7" baking dish. Beat a half-cup hot drippings until thick and piled softly. Add 2 beaten eggs, 1 cup milk, 1 cup sifted flour, a bit of salt. Pour into baking dish over hot beef drippings, including brown bits from meat. Bake at about 400 degrees until puffed and golden brown. Cut into squares, serving right off with generous slices of roast beef.

Team this with Brussels sprouts. The sprouts should be barely cooked.

Or serve the freshest new asparagus stalks. Relieve them of all sand by a good soaking. Rinse. Cook in a coffee percolator, branches tied tightly with white string, standing upright. Cook well through. Drain well. Use mayonnaise with lemon juice as a bright sauce.

We hope that Prince Charles saw some of the more quaint aspects of Charleston, the American port named after one of his ancestors. As far as we are personally concerned this charming southern city is replete with memories of another era. For us two significant facts stand out: (1) Charleston was the birthplace of rice in America. (2) My ancestor Landgraeve Smith was the first to receive and plant what was later to be known as South Carolina's gold.

Rice Griddle Cakes: Steam 1 cup cooked cold rice in ¼ cup milk until softened. Add enough milk to make ¾ cup milk in all. Mix in 1 tsp. melted butter, 1 beaten egg yolk, 1 tsp. sugar, ¼ tsp. salt and ½ cup flour sifted with 1 tsp. baking powder. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg white. Bake on buttered griddle iron. Serve for breakfast with marmalade. This amount serves 7 or 8.

It is said that when Lafayette landed in America to help with the cause of freedom, he was entertained lavishly by my cousin Major Huger. At the Sunday dinners, when the table was beautifully laid with Minton, as many as 14 dishes were served, starting with a delicate crab soup. Ah, those early mornings in flower-scented air, with the soft southern voices crying, "She-crab, come an' git yo' share!"

UC scholarships to trio

Three students from Carmel, two of them high school seniors, have been awarded scholarships to UC Berkeley. The scholarships are determined by each student's financial need and the money is applied to tuition for the 1977-78 term.

The recipients are John C. Jinishian, attending Monterey Peninsula College; Mary C. Lor, a student at Carmel High School; and Kathleen E. Sanders, a senior at Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

The awards were given by the California Alumni Association, which receives funding from both the university and private sources. There were some 1,400 applicants for aid.

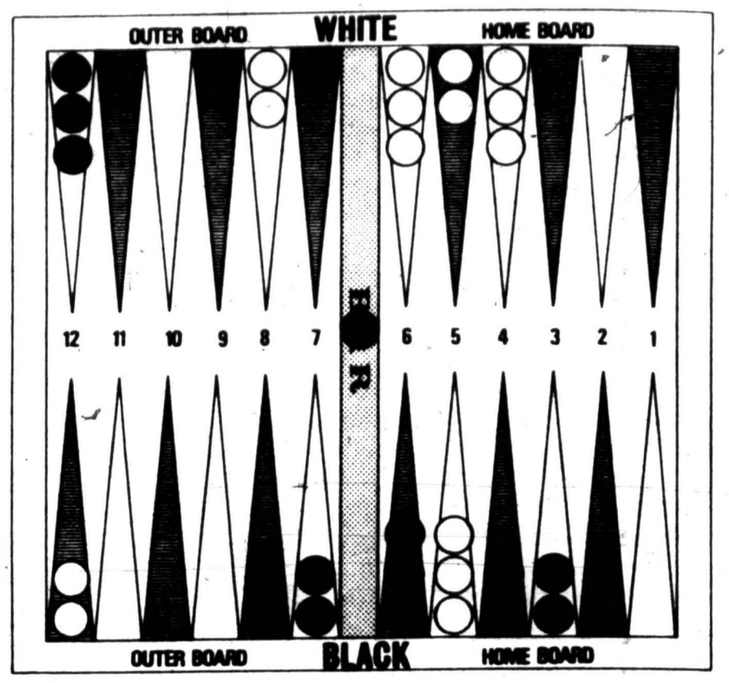
Backgammon by Omar Sharif



Black rolls 5-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

. The 2 is forced — Black must enter the White home board with the man on the bar. That leaves him with a choice of 5's: 1) He can run the same man to the White bar-point; 2) he can play a man off the White 12-point to his own 8-point; 3) he can drop a man onto his 1-point from his 6-point.

Options 2) and 3) are basically the same. They leave the man in the White home board subject to being pointed on only by 6-2, 6-4, 4-2 or 2-2 — a total of seven of a possible 36 combinations that can be rolled. Therefore, either move would be relatively safe.

Running the man to the bar-point would expose it to direct 6's and combinations of 6 as well as 1's. However, very few combinations allow White to point on the blot — only 1-1 and 6-6 do so safely; 6-1 would leave White with two blots.

Black is way ahead in the race, and his position is good even though White holds the "golden point," i.e., Black's 5-point. Black's concern should be to get his runner to safety as quickly as possible, and the way to do that is to run the man to White's bar-point.

Black need not concern himself unduly about getting hit — for the moment, anyway. It is far better to get hit now, while there are still three points open in White's home board, than to do so later when White might have another point or two held there. Incidentally, that is one of the dangers of remaining on the 2-point — if White does succeed in pointing on the Black blot, or even in hitting without getting hit back, Black's advantage has lessened.

TIP: If you must expose yourself to a shot, do so in the position that is most advantageous to you. In the position above, Black does not mind getting hit on the bar-point because that exposes White to return shots.

Carmel Beach nuisance?

Commissioner wants ban on coastline 'jetting'

A MOTORIZED contraption that gives you the effect of waterskiing without a boat could be outlawed along the Carmel shoreline if a city planning commissioner has his way.

Jet Ski, similar to a snowmobile but for water, has irked Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson enough for him to request it be banished from Carmel Beach.

Although the commission probably will not make recommendations until November, and City Council won't hear the commission's report until December, Davidson brought up the Jet Ski issue at a September Planning Commission meeting.

The commissioner complained that the Jet Ski is a nuisance to swimmers, surfers and beachgoers. He said it makes an "outrageous" sound and disturbs the feeding habits of seagulls.

THERE IS NOT much the city can do, according to Planning Director Bob Griggs. The only controlling agent would be the State Department of Fish and Game, he said.

The city code does not specifically prohibit landing and launching of vehicles from Carmel Beach, according to City Attorney George Brehmer. It says only that "no person shall drive or operate any vehicle on the beach."

Launching and landing boats on the beach has become a matter of discussion since Jet Ski was mentioned at the September Planning Commission meeting.

Complaints from residents, Davidson said, prompted him to complain. The Sierra Club, however, said it has received no complaints about the Jet Ski. Corky Matthews, editor of the Sierra Club newsletter Ventana, said she has heard no mention of the machine.

The manager of one Jet Ski outlet says if the vehicle is used prudently, there would be no problem. "If they are becoming a pain in the fanny, then I'd say Carmel should ban them," said John Schuler, manager of Kawasaki of Monterey.

•

THE JET SKI costs $1,600 and travels up to 35 miles per hour. The machine can be rigged to go faster, explained Schuler. "They make about as much noise as a motorcycle," he said.

Our Churches

All Saints'

The All Saints' Episcopal Church conducts traditional Sunday services at 8 a.m. and contemporary church school at 9 and 11 a.m. Daily morning and evening prayers may be offered at the church at 8:45 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Baha'i Faith

In honor of the birth in 1817 of Baha'u'llah, a Persian religious leader and founder of the Baha'i Faith, the Baha'is of Carmel are presenting a week-long series of seminars starting Sunday. Topics deal with the Aquarian Age, child development, family relations and communication, prayer and meditation, Baha'i history and death and dying.

On Sunday, 8 p.m., "Baha'U'llah and The Aquarian Age" is scheduled at the Carl Cherry Foundation, Fourth and Guadalupe.

Carmel Mission

Father Richard H. Fennessy, assistant pastor, will address the Carmel Mission Basilica Altar Society on Thursday, Nov. 10, at 2 p.m. in Crespi Hall. Hostesses for the tea, which follows the meeting, are Miss Mary Miller, Miss Mary Scott and Mrs. Robert Swanston.

The Feast of St. Charles Borromeo, patron saint of the Carmel Mission, will be observed at the daily Masses on Friday in the Blessed Sacrament Chapel.

St. Charles Borromeo (1538-1584) was born in the castle of Arona near Lago Maggiore, in northern Italy. He was the son of Count Gilberto Borromeo and Margherita de Medici, sister of Pope Pius IV. Grief at the death of an elder brother turned Charles away from the world's more transitory values, and led to his ordination to the priesthood in 1562.

Though successful in reassembling the Council of Trent, his chief fame is as an archbishop. Among his works were the establishment of religious education centers for children and seminaries for training priests.

Don Jose de Galvez, viceroy to the king of Spain, instructed Father Junipero Serra to name the Carmel Mission "Mission de San Carlos Borromeo" since he was the patron saint of the reigning King Charles III.

Christian Science

The prescribed readings from the Bible and Christian Science textbook will focus on "Adam and Fallen Man" Sunday at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. Members of the church meet to share healing experiences on Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m.

Presbyterian

The second in a series of seven classes titled "How Are We Now Living?" will meet Sunday evening, 7 to 8:30 p.m., in the Fireside Room of Carmel Presbyterian Church. The focus of the class, led by Al and Pam Larson, is a film by Dr. Francis A. Schaeffer. Issues raised in the film will be examined in detail through discussion. Nursery care is available for those with children.

The discussion is one of the many Adult Enrichment programs sponsored by the Carmel Presbyterians.

Wayfarer

The Church of the Wayfarer, a United Methodist Church, conducts services at 9:30 and 11 a.m. on Sunday morning. Coffee and fellowship await churchgoers after each service in the well-known Biblical gardens. At 7 p.m. on Sunday, the youth group meets in the youth lounge.

REAL ESTATE

FROM CARMEL VALLEY TO CARMEL BAY

The House of the Thirteen Lamps on Camino Real in Carmel

Statistics are usually a bore, but these will give you an idea of the scale and luxury of this extraordinary, brand new house.

There really are 13 burnished brass carriage lamps, of tasteful design, which highlight the front, side and rear. There are 76 cabinet doors, 16 cabinet drawers and 15 closet doors, all ash and all dark-stained. There are 12 thermostats for highly selective electric heating.

There are 3 bedrooms, including 2 master suites; 3½ baths; and two each of fireplaces, garage spaces with Genie doors, overhanging front balconies and built-in ovens . . . plus a microwave oven. In the one only category are 1 entrance hall, upstairs hall, living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, library or den, and paved, private rear terrace.

To complete the numbers, this is 2700 sq. ft. of living space on nearly 2 Carmel lots within 2 blocks of Ocean Avenue and 3 blocks of the beach.

What the numbers do not show is the remarkable finish work and craftsmanship. For instance, all the downstairs rooms have 8 foot white ceilings crossed by a grid of 4 x 4 dark fir beams. Floors throughout, except the entrance hall and kitchen, are covered by creamy deep pile carpet . . . even the bathrooms. Counter tops in kitchen and baths are rich, dark ceramic tile. And all the bath fixtures are finished in gold.

The ceilings in the upstairs bedrooms reveal massive fir crossbeams traversed by 2 x 8 natural pine planks. All the windows are steel framed, some picture style, some divided into vertical panes.

Two master suites? Yes, that's true. The north bedroom, 18 x 22, and bath is guest quarters with its own balcony over-looking Carmel Bay, no connection upstairs, and its own private entrance up a tiled staircase from the rear terrace. It can be reached through the breakfast room, or closed off. The south bedroom, 15 x 12, has its own bath and dressing area, fireplace, and a wider balcony with view of the sea. The middle bedroom is almost a duplicate.

You'll find the House of the Thirteen Lamps just north of 8th, second house on the east side, diagonally across from the La Playa Hotel. Call 624-1838 for a personal tour. The price is $260,000.

Dog bite victim asks help

Carmel police are searching for the owner of a tan Labrador that bit a woman Monday in the parking lot of Wells Fargo Bank in Carmel.

The victim, Ceanne Fellows, 23, of Carmel, was bitten on the right palm. She was walking between a parked car and a white pickup truck with two dogs, a Labrador and an Irish setter, in it. The Labrador lunged at her and bit her, she said.

The owner of the dogs reportedly gave the victim a false name and address. She said she was unable to locate any "Bill Jackson" at an address on "Stoney Court" in Carmel.

Ms. Fellows was treated Monday by a private physician. She has asked for help locating the owner of the dogs.

He was described as a man in his mid-20s, 5-10, with dark curly hair about medium length.

If the dog cannot be located, Ms. Fellows must undergo antirabies treatment. The treatment involves a series of injections over 10 days. Dogs that bite usually are quarantined by authorities to determine if they have rabies.

Sorority luncheon set on Wednesday

The event starts at 12:30 p.m. in the main lounge. Reservations can be obtained by calling Mrs. Stuart Blythe, 624-7346, or Mrs. Bruce Hanger, 624-7167.

SWIMWEAR EXECUTIVE Gene E. Faul, raised in Carmel, is named president of Robert Talbott Ties.

Gene Faul new Talbott Ties president

"I'm home again," said Gene E. Faul, named the president of Robert Talbott Ties on Tuesday.

Faul, 47, was raised in Carmel where his family operated the Bib 'n' Tucker Children's Store. He and his wife, Karen, are co-owners of Jag of Carmel, a women's apparel store.

Speaking for himself and his wife, Robert Talbott, chairman of the tie company, said, "It has long been Audrey's and my desire to keep and continue this company as a family company and to make the necessary plans to assure the continuation of an effort that has taken over a quarter of a century to build. Audrey and I feel strongly that we have built something rather special which should be preserved."

Faul resigned in July as president of Cole of California, a leading swimwear maker. He had held the position since 1974. Before joining Cole, Faul was executive vice-president of Catalina Co., also a swimwear apparel firm.

The executive graduated from the University of Santa Clara in 1952, spent two years in the U.S. Army and managed his family's clothing store in Carmel for three years before joining Catalina Co., in 1958. He was promoted to executive vice-president at Catalina in 1972.

Talbott neckwear is sold at two company stores on Ocean Avenue and through sales representatives nationwide. Robert and Audrey Talbott started the firm themselves, stitching the bowties fashionable in the early '50s.
